AISES Region 7 Conference
April 21-22, 2023
Lumberton, NC

Hosted by Robeson Community College

Dear Attendees,

It is our pleasure to welcome you to the 2023 Region 7 Conference of The American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES). We are thrilled to bring this event to Robeson Community College in Lumberton, North Carolina, on April 21st and 22nd.

This conference is a unique opportunity for students, educators, professionals, and community members to learn, network, and discuss issues related to science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) fields. Our goal is to provide a supportive and inclusive environment where everyone feels welcomed and empowered to reach their full potential.

At this conference, you will have the chance to participate in a wide range of activities, including keynote addresses, panel discussions, technical workshops, cultural learning, and a career hub. You will also have the opportunity to engage with fellow attendees and experts in your field, learn about cutting-edge research, and gain valuable skills and knowledge that will help you succeed in your academic and professional journey.

We are committed to making this conference a safe and enjoyable experience for everyone, and we will be following all local and national guidelines to ensure the health and well-being of our attendees. We also invite you to explore the beautiful town of Lumberton and the surrounding areas, which are rich in history and culture.

We would like to give a special thanks to our conference sponsors who have supported our efforts as we honor and celebrate American Indians throughout this nation. Please see their ads throughout this program and support them now and in the future.

We thank you for your interest in AISES and the Region 7 Conference, and we look forward to welcoming you to Robeson Community College.

Sincerely,

AISES Region 7 Conference Committee

Keynote Speaker - Friday, April 21

JADA L. BROOKS, PhD, MSPH, RN, FAAN, PhD Program Lead Faculty
UNC School of Nursing
Associate Professor and Ross Distinguished Term Scholar of Psychiatric-Mental Health Nursing

Jada L. Brooks, an enrolled member of the Lumbee Tribe, is an Associate Professor and Ross Distinguished Term Scholar of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Nursing. One of few Indigenous nurses holding a doctoral degree, Dr. Brooks is widely regarded as a scholar and leader in health disparities research with tribal communities in North Carolina and beyond. Funded externally for two decades by the National Institutes of Health, her 20+ years of community-engaged research focuses on environmental conditions that shape health outcomes and inequalities among American Indians. As an Indigenous nurse scientist, Dr. Brooks is dedicated to raising awareness about environmental health in Indian Country and is equally devoted to cultivating the next generation of environmental leaders.

DAY 1

Friday, April 21 10:15am – 11:00am

MAKING THE MOST OF COLLEGE - HOW TO SET YOURSELF UP FOR EARLY CAREER SUCCESS AND BEYOND! | RM 1401A, DOWNSTAIRS

Michael Sanderson, Manufacturing Automation Engineer - Pfizer

In this session, the presenter shares information that precollege and college students can use to help give them a better foundation for starting their career drawing from recent experiences of undergrad and being an early professional. College truly is an extension of your career giving you a base for the ability to learn, building a network, and some experience that will be leveraged into getting that first job after graduation. Topics to explore will include using resources such as tutoring centers, Student Support Services (Trio), and their Career Development Centers (CDC's). Exploring different experiences such as studying abroad, to do a rotational COOP or not to COOP (the downsides to not having any experience when graduating), and joining student clubs. Personal activities that could be beneficial such as developing a routine, saving money/learning how to manage finances, and taking time to learn more about yourself.

Common dilemmas: Do I need a masters? Why it's a good idea to start planning for furthering your education instead of waiting.

Why do I need a mentor? Understanding what type of mentorship is needed for what situation.

Should I stick to this degree? Why it's okay to not know what you want to do (a lot of people don't know what they want to do).

THE FUTURE OF CYBERSECURITY | RM 1458A, DOWNSTAIRS

Zach Oxendine, Engineering Technical Program Manager – Microsoft

Cybersecurity professionals are concerned about the growing number and sophistication of cyber threats and attacks, which can result in significant financial and reputational damage. They are also worried about the shortage of skilled cybersecurity professionals and the skills gap, as demand for cybersecurity expertise continues to grow faster than the supply of qualified candidates. In addition, emerging technologies like AI, machine learning, and IoT pose new challenges and risks, creating new attack surfaces that are difficult to secure. Finally, compliance with a growing number of regulations and standards related to data privacy and security is a major concern for cybersecurity professionals, as non-compliance can result in significant consequences for organizations.

DAY 1

Friday, April 21 11:15am – 12:00pm

EMPOWERING NATIVE AMERICAN YOUTH THROUGH STEM: LESSONS FROM THE WACCAMAW SIOUAN STEM STUDIO | RM 1413A, DOWNSTAIRS

Coty Sutherland, Software Engineering Manager - Red Hat, Inc.

As you probably know, the underrepresentation of Native Americans in STEM fields is a persistent problem, but one that can be addressed through early and consistent engagement in STEM education. The Waccamaw Siouan STEM Studio, an award-winning STEM program for tribal youth, has developed a successful model for promoting STEM education and careers among Native American youth.

Led by Indigenous community members and grounded in Indigenous values, the STEM Studio provides a culturally inclusive environment for youth to learn about STEM topics and interact with STEM professionals who look like them. The program has expanded to include annual programs like the Yaccune Camp and STEM Day, as well as new experiences such as computer programming, archaeology, and 3D printing.

In this presentation, we will share the story of how the STEM Studio was founded and the values that drive the program. We will also provide practical guidance for audience members who may be interested in starting their own STEM programs in their tribes or communities. Topics covered will include securing funding and fiscal sponsorship, identifying STEM professionals within the community, and developing culturally responsive programming.

We believe that empowering Native American youth through STEM education is a critical step in addressing the lack of representation in STEM fields. By sharing our experiences and lessons learned, we hope to inspire and support others in creating similar programs in their own communities. Join us to learn more about the Waccamaw Siouan STEM Studio and how you can make a difference in the lives of Native American youth.

2023 AISES CONFERENCE REGION 7 AFTERNOON OPTION 1 - PROFESSIONAL SESSIONS

DAY 1

Friday, April 21 1:15pm – 2:00pm

HEALTHY PEOPLE MAKES HEALTHY COMMUNITIES | RM 1458A, DOWNSTAIRS

Rocky Locklear, Clinical Mental Health Counselor – Scotland Family Counseling Center

For generations, Indigenous peoples have used a holistic model to discuss the many aspects of one's individual health, known as the medicine wheel. The medicine wheel maps the interconnectedness of mental, emotional, physical, and spiritual health, as it pertains to the community and the individual. During the presentation, we will discuss how to use the medicine wheel concept to view our own personal health in a holistic manner. We will then determine real life examples of how different aspects of our health affect each other. Finally, we will construct action plans to address needs in our individual health and utilize tools to compact unhealthy practices.
